URAGUAYANS OVER OCEAN IN LONG TRIP

Fliers Are Rapidly Bridging Gap Between Seville and Montevideo.

(BULLETIN.)

PARIS, Dec. 16.—(INS.)—The French gunboat Belfort today sighted the trans-Atlantic plane of Major Larre-Borges and Captain Challe in position 5.20 north latitude 27.00 west longitude. This position is about 900 miles north of the Brazilian coast.

SEVILLE, Spain, Dec. 16.—Determined to break all existing records for non-stop flights, Major Tadeo Larre-Borges of Uruguay and Lieut. Leon Challes of France today were believed to be well out over the South Atlantic, rapidly bridging the ocean gap between the western coast of Africa and the northeast coast of South America in their attempt to fly from this city to Montevideo, Uruguay.

A wireless message, presumably relayed directly from the radio of the powerful single-motored biplane in which the fliers are making their attempt, indicated that about 13 hours after the start of their flight at 12:37 p. m. (7.37 a. m., N. Y. time) yesterday, they expected to head out across the sea from Cape Blanco, Africa.

The fliers had previously been reported sighted over a northern community of the Spanish-west African colony of Rio De Oro of which Cape Blanco is the southernmost point, more than 1,900 miles south of this starting point.

OUT TO SEA
If they actually passed out to sea at about 1:30 a. m. this morning (8:30 p. m. last night N. Y. time), as they indicated they expected to, the fliers were maintaining an average speed of better than 100 miles an hour.

Their plane was sighted over Casa Blanca, Morocco, at 3:23 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The fliers at that time had covered more than 300 miles in less than three hours, indicating they were keeping up to the speedily schedule they had set for themselves.

Weather reports were favorable along the southwesterly route the fliers were following. With favorable following winds, they hoped to cover the distance from Seville to Montevideo, approximately 6,000 miles, in about 50 hours.

After leaving the African coast, the airmen expected to head for the Cape Verde islands, then continue on their southwesterly course across the ocean span to either Natal or Pernambuco on the northeast coast of Brazil, then south, along the east coast of South America over Bahia and Rio De Janeiro to their objective, Montevideo.

The over-water jump from Cape Blanco to northeastern Brazil is about 2,300 miles. After reaching Brazil, the fliers would still have an equal distance before them before Montevideo.

Larre-Borges and Challes took off easily in their white Breguet biplane, powered by a 450 horsepower Lorraine motor. A huge crowd gave them a tremendous send-off.

CARRIES RADIO
Their plane, carried about 1,350 gallons of gasoline and 200 gallons of lubricating oil. The plane's radio outfit was adjusted to operate on a wave length of 900 meters.

The airmen carried parachutes, two collapsible life-rats, life-belts, fruit, chicken, mineral water, champagne and some rum, taking every precaution to safeguard against a possible landing on either sea or some isolated spot on land. The gas and oil tanks were equipped with a special valve permitting their being emptied quickly to give the plane buoyancy should a landing on water be found necessary.

Larre-Borges insisted on an adequate supply of food. This was his second attempt to span the (Turn to page two, please)

HOUSE READY TO VOTE NEW FED. BUILDING

Program Embraces Two Bills
In Support of Hoover's
Expansion Project.

By WILLIAM S. NEAL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Invoking President Hoover's business expansion program to justify its action, the House today prepared to vote $238,740,000 for federal building activities throughout the nation.

The program was embraced in two bills by Representative Elliott (R) of Indiana, chairman of the buildings committee. One carries an authorization of $115,000,000 for federal buildings outside the district of Columbia and $115,000,000 in the national capital, while the second provides specifically $9,740,000 for a supreme court building.

Assured of an overwhelming majority for the measures, Representative Elliott planned to call them up for passage under suspension of the rules, which requires a two-thirds vote.

The house is prepared to follow the building program with vast additional sums for inland waterways, flood control and other measures for expansion of federal activities.

The $230,000,000 public buildings bill is expected to carry the program already under way to a conclusion in approximately seven years, providing a government-owned postoffice in every city in the country in which annual receipts exceed $20,000.

Already Congress has authorized $248,000,000 for public buildings outside the district of Columbia, having launched a 10-year building program three years ago. The bill will increase existing authorizations to a total sum for public buildings throughout the country outside the District of Columbia of $383,000,000 and for the executive departments in the national capital for building and lands of $190,000,000.

"The amounts carried in this bill are deemed sufficient to carry out the program of rebuilding the National capital and to construct throughout the country post offices where needed, in towns having more than $20,000 annual postal receipts."

The bill provides for an increase in the annual building expenditures outside the district from $35,000,000 to $50,000,000. The measure carries no authorizations for specific postoffices. Actual building projects will be recommended only after passage of the legislation by the treasury and postoffice building committee.

SCIENTISTS BELIEVE 'MISSING LINK' IS FOUND NEAR PEKING

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Hopes that the "missing link" which has baffled anthropologists for centuries has at last been discovered were expressed by scientists here today as the result of excavations by American and Canadian paleontologists near Peking which resulted in the finding of the fossilized remains of 10 men who believed to have lived a million years ago.

According to detailed dispatches to the Daily Telegraph and other London newspapers, the bones were discovered by scientists representing the Rockefeller foundation and the geographical survey of China. Belief is expressed in scientific circles here that the discoveries excell in interest and importance any previous findings.

The 10 skeletons, some of them apparently in a splendid state of preservation, were found huddled together in an open field at Chou Outien, some 30 miles outside of Peking, long known to scientists as a fertile field for anthropological investigations.

Among the discoveries was a perfect skull unearthed by Dr. Davidson Black, world renowned Canadian paleontologist, which is said to prove that men, with power of thinking, building tools and of walking upright, existed on this earth at the beginning of the ice age.

This skull, comprising perfect cranium and facial bones, is described as the most important as well as the most remarkable contribution to the history of human development.

On the basis of measurements of the frontal cranium and the general proportions of the skull, Dr. Black has reached the conclusion, the dispatches state, that the "Peking man" was a being who stood erect and dated as far back as the ice age, 1,000,000 years ago.

The 10 skeletons, of which the all-important skull was a part, lay huddled together in a small cave, indicating to the scientists that they led a community life.

Every British authority who has either seen the skull or read the scientists' reports, describe the discovery as epoch-making, out-rivaling all previous discoveries, including those of the Pittdown man and the Neanderthal man, which heretofore furnished the chief evidence from which the

JAPS ARRIVE TO ASK NEW SHIP RATIO

Want 10-10-7 Proportion Instead of Original 5-5-3 With United States.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Headed by Reijiro Wakatsuki and Admiral Takerabe, Japan's delegation to the London naval parity arrived here today and laid down a barrage for an increased cruiser and auxiliary craft ratio over the capital ship 5-5-3 ratio agreed upon at the Washington arms conference of 1921.

Japan has announced she wants the cruiser ratio fixed at 10-10-7, and the first move to convince the United States of the necessity for her demand will be made at a conference the delegation will have with Washington correspondents tonight.

The delegation, met at Union station by Secretary of State Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Adams and other high state and navy officials, will be in Washington until Thursday when it will leave for New York. The Japanese will sail on the Olympic for London on Saturday.

While no time has been set for the informal and preliminary conference with President Hoover, Stimson and the American naval experts, it is expected ample opportunity will be afforded between a rather full program of official dinners and receptions in honor of the Japanese.

Wakatsuki is a former premier of Japan and Admiral Takerabe is minister of marine. They are the only delegates in the part. Ambassador Matsudaira of Japan at London, will be another delegate, and some other Japanese diplomats already in Europe are expected to be added to the delegation from there.

The meeting between the Japanese and American delegations will be the first actual conversations of their kind as a preliminary move to iron out differences before the London conference begins, between powers other than Great Britain and the United States.

There have been exchanges of views, however, between Japanese Ambassador De-buchi and Stimson, and the latter has been conducting similar indirect negotiations with the diplomatic representatives of France and Italy.

Besides the increased ratio demand of Japan, the submarine question will also be a subject for discussion. Japan is not expected to take kindly to the British suggestion that submarines be abolished, and thus lines herself up with France and Italy.

The American attitude, expressed first at the Washington capital ship conference, is that if all nations agree to outlaw the undersea craft, the United States would agree. Otherwise it would be futile to attempt it, according to the American view.

Recognizing the potentialities for trouble at London on both the increased ratio and submarine questions, the Japanese and American delegations are preparing to settle as many differences as possible before going to London.

Many officials here believe that despite the assurances of British Foreign Minister Arthur Henderson to the French that Britain has not form of an alliance with the United States, together with the announcement by Stimson that no cut and dried program has been adopted by the United States, the greatest danger to the success of the London conference will come from the French.

On the other hand, Japan's attitude is being watched with intensity, and Rome where between the French and Italians on our hand and Japan on the other, a satisfactory formula must be found, officials believe. President Hoover has to receive them at 2:15 p. m. at the White House. There were no engagements listed for the rest of the afternoon, and there was a possibility that some of the conversations would begin today.

Just as Buck reached a place near the Marion greenhouse, he says the man pushed a gun into his side and demanded his money, which he turned over at once.

TAXPAYERS TRY TO STOP NEW SCHOOL

Claim That $40,000 Grade
Building, Passed at Election, Is Not Needed.

Charging that to spend $40,000 for a new school building in Wayne-twp rural school district would be beyond the needs of the school district, that it would be an economic waste of the taxpayers money, and that it would be a gross abuse of the board of education authority, 20 residents of Wayne-twp rural school district filed a suit in common pleas court Saturday through their attorneys, Abernethy and Simkins, asking that the board of education be restrained from selling bonds for the construction of the school.

Judge J. W. Adkins has not as yet taken action on the petition.

The bond issue calling for $40,000 for a fireproof school was passed at the general election by a vote of 110 to 67.

The action asks for an injunction to restrain the board of education from selling bonds, alleging that the expenditure of the sum of $40,000 for the construction of the fireproof building is at this time a gross abuse of the power and authority of the board of education, that the expenditure of so large a sum of money for such a building as is proposed to be constructed is far beyond the needs of said rural district and will be an economic waste of the taxpayers' money.

The petition goes on to say that Wayne-twp is one of the smallest in the county and that there are not more than 150 students enrolled. There is a building at Westfall in the township which is in good repair and with its accessibility to other schools which are made available under the statutes for the pupils attending that school; that the building is within five miles of Circleville; five miles of Union-twp centralized school in Ross-co; six miles of the Jackson-twp centralized school and that there are good roads to each school at all times for the transportation of students to these schools.

The petition asks that the board of education be restrained from issuing or causing to be issued the bonds and from levying any tax for the purpose of constructing the school. It also asks that the county auditor, Bryce Briggs, be restrained from performing any act in connection with the school.

The signers of the action are: J. B. Stevenson, Robert Immel, Ward H. Peck, John C. Stevenson, Frank Ebenbach, Andrew Corcoran, George Wardell, William Hoff-man, J. W. Houghton, F. B. Kirby, George Bolender, Bertha Jones, Gardner Jones, Mary A. Carman, I. Smith Hulse, Joseph C. Thomas, J. F. Simkins, Jacob Schierberg, William Metzger and Albert Manse, on behalf of the heirs of John E. Stevenson, deceased.

The present board of education of Wayne-twp rural school district is composed of John Peters, John Wardell, Floyd Williams, Shirley Dowden, Asa Barthelmas and Ward H. Peck.

HOUSE READY TO VOTE NEW FED. BUILDING

Program Embraces Two Bills
In Support of Hoover's
Expansion Project.

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Invoking President Hoover's business expansion program to justify its action, the House today prepared to vote $239,740,000 for federal building activities throughout the nation.

The program was embraced in two bills by Representative Elliott (R) of Indiana, chairman of the buildings committee. One carries an authorization of $115,000,000 for federal buildings outside the district of Columbia and $115,000,- 000 in the national capital, while the second provides specifically $9,740,000 for a supreme court building.

Assured of an overwhelming majority for the measures, Representative Elliott planned to call them up for passage under suspension of the rules, which requires a two-thirds vote.

The house is prepared to follow
the building program with vast additional sums for inland waterways, flood control and other measures for expansion of federal activities.

The $239,000,000 public buildings bill is expected to carry the program already under way to a conclusion in approximately seven years, providing a government-owned postoffice in every city in the country in which annual receipts exceed $20,000.

Already Congress has authorized $248,000,000 for public buildings outside the district of Columbia, having launched a 10-year building program three years ago.

"The bill will increase existing authorizations to a total sum for public buildings throughout the country outside the District of Columbia of $363,000,000 and for the executive departments in the national capital for building and lands of $190,000,000.

"The amounts carried in this bill are deemed sufficient to carry out the program of rebuilding the National capital and to construct troughout the country post offices where needed, in towns having more than $20,000 annual postal receipts."

The bill provides for an increase in the annual building expenditures outside the district from $35,000,000 to $50,000,000.
The measure carries no authori-zations for specific postoffices.
Actual building projects will be recommended only after passage of the legislation by the treasury and postoffice building committee.

the "missing link" which has bar-tered anthropologists for centuries has at last been discovered were expressed by scientists here today as the result of excavations by American and Canadian paleontol-ogists near Peking which resulted in the finding of the fossilized remains of 10 men who believed to have lived a million years ago.

According to detailed dispatches to the Daily Telegraph and other London newspapers, the bones were discovered by scientists representing the Rockefeller foundation and the geographical survey of China. Belief is expressed in scientific circles here that the discoveries excel in interest and importance any previous findings.

The 10 skeletons, some of them apparently in a splendid state of preservation, were found huddled together in an open field at Chou Outien, some 30 miles outside of Peking, long known to scientists as a fertile field for anthropological investigations.

Among the discoveries was a perfect skull unearthed by Dr.
Davidson Black, world renowned Canadian paleontologist, which is said to prove that men, with power of thinking, building tools and of walking upright, existed on this earth at the beginning of the ice age.

This skull, comprising perfect cranium and facial bones, is described as the most important as well as the most remarkable contribution to the history of human development.

On the basis of measurements of the frontal cranium and the general proportions of the skull, Dr. Black has reached the conclusion, the dispatches state, that the "Peking man" was a being who stood erect and dated as far back as the ice age, 1,000,000 years ago.

The 10 skeletons, of which the all-important skull was a part,
lay huddled together in a small cave, indicating to the scientists that they led a community life.

Every British authority who has either seen the skull or read the scientists' reports, describe the discovery as epoch-making, out-rivaling all previous discoveries, including those of the Pittdown
man and the Neanderthal man, which heretofore furnished the chief evidence from which the

Smaller Homes Can Be Decorated As Effectively As Larger Homes

In the Christmas Lighting and Decorating Contest being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce
the decoration for homes can take many forms and by various effect produce an enchanting array of display that radiates the Christmas message in glowing rays of light. The beauty of the simple but original lighting installation has been exemplified in recent prize winning exhibitions held in other cities.

At the edge of the roof of the house, bungalow type, a large star of Bethlehem gleamed forth with a clear white light, while dotted in the shrubbery growing near the house are colored lights that seemed to blossom from the bare shrubbery by some miracle of nature for the holiday occasion.

Nature again played its part in this Christmas decoration with a bountiful supply of snow which glistened in the night when the lights cast their rays.

People with the small home of this type, need not hesitate in entering the contest, for fear of the larger home having an advantage,
for the small home with simple arrangements will have just as good an opportunity to win the major prize as the larger home with spacious veranda and yard.

JAPS ARRIVE TO ASK NEW SHIP RATIO

Want 10-10-7 Proportion Instead of Original 5-5-3
With United States.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Headed by Reijiro Wakatsuki and Admiral Takerabe, Japan's delegation to the London naval parley arrived here today and laid down
a barrage for an increased cruiser and auxiliary craft ratio over the capital ship 5-5-3 ratio agreed upon at the Washington arms conference of 1921.

Japan has announced she wants the cruiser ratio fixed at 10-10-7, and the first move to convince the United States of the necessity for her demand will be made at a conference the delegation will have with Washington correspondents tonight.

The delegation, met at Union station by Secretary of State
Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Adams and other high state and navy officials, will be in Washington until Thursday when it will leave for New York. The Japanese will sail on the Olympic for London on Saturday.

While no time has been set for the informal and preliminary conference with President Hoover, Stimson and the American naval experts, it is expected ample opportunity will be afforded between a rather full program of official dinners and receptions in honor of the Japanese.

Wakatsuki is a former premier of Japan and Admiral Takerabe is minister of marine. They are the only delegates in the part.
Ambassador Matsudaira of Japan
at London, will be another delegate, and some other Japanese diplomats already in Europe are expected to be added to the delegation from there.

The meeting between the Japanese and American delegations will be the first actual conversations of their kind as a preliminary move to iron out differences before the London conference begins, between powers other than Great Britain and the United States. There have been exchanges of views, however, between Japanese Ambassador De-buchi and Stimson and the latter has been conducting similar direct negotiations with the diplomatic representatives of France and Italy.

Besides the increased ratio demand of Japan, the submarine question will also be a subject for discussion. Japan is not expected to take kindly to the British suggestion that submarines be abolished, and thus lines herself up with France and Italy.

The American attitude, expressed first at the Washington capital ship conference, is that if all nations agree to outlaw the under-sea craft, the United States would agree. Otherwise it would be futile to attempt it, according to the American view.

Recognizing the potentialities for trouble at London on both the increased ratio and submarine questions, the Japanese and American delegations are preparing to settle as many differences as possible before going to London.

Many officials here believe that despite the assurances of British Foreign Minister Arthur Henderson
to the French that Britain has not form of an alliance with the United States, together with the announcement by Stimson that no cut and dried program has been adopted by the United States, the greatest danger to the success of the London conference will come from the French.

On the other hand, Japan's attitude is being watched with intensity, and Rome where between the French and Italians on our hand, and Japan on the other,
a satisfactory formula must be found, officials believe. President Hoover has to receive them at 2:15 p. m. at the White House.
There were no engagements listed for the rest of the afternoon, and there was a possibility that some of the conversations would begin today.

port.

HITCH-HIKER HOLDS UP MAN

George Buck, Salesman, Says
Man Whom He Gave Ride
Used Gun To Get $20.

George Buck, residing at the American Hotel, salesman for the Van Camp Hardware Co., of Indianapolis, tried to be a Good Samaritan late Saturday by picking up a hitch-hiker and after a short journey on the Lancaster-pk toward Circleville, found himself minus a wallet containing a $20 bill.

A man was walking on the pike toward Circleville near Amanda and asked Buck for a ride into Circleville. He stopped his car and permitted the man to sit beside him. Just as Buck reached a place near the Marion greenhouse, he says the man pushed a gun into his side and demanded his money, which he turned over at once.

When the stranger had pocketed the money he told Buck to drive on and when the car reached the corner of Mingo and Main-st the passenger got out. No arrest has been made.

WHEELING MAN FORFEITS BOND

House-to-house Peddler Arrested Saturday For Selling Without License.

K. A. Hassan, giving his home
as Wheeling, W. Va., forfeited $10 bond for his appearance to answer to a charge of peddling goods house-to-house without a license.

Hassan was arrested at 4:35 p.
m. Saturday by Officer McCrady
when he was found trying to sell tapestry, bed spreads, rugs and other things at doors.

He gave $10 bond for his appearance for a hearing Saturday evening but failed to show up.

PARALYSIS FATAL TO SHOE DEALER

(INS)—Calvin Holmes, 71, prominent midwestern shoe manufacturer, died at his home here last night as a direct result of a stroke

three months ago. He was secretary of the P. Hagerty Shoe company which has extensive holdings

TAXPAYERS TRY TO STOP NEW SCHOOL

Claim That $40,000 Grade
Building, Passed at Election, Is Not Needed.

Charging that to spend $40,000 for a new school building in Wayne-twp rural school district
would be beyond the needs of the school district, that it would be an economic waste of the taxpayers money, and that it would be a gross abuse of the board of educations authority, 20 residents of Wayne-twp rural school district
filed a suit in common pleas court
Saturday through their attorneys, Abernethy and Simkins, asking that the board of education be restrained from selling bonds for the construction of the school.

The bond issue calling for $40,- 000 for a fireproof school was passed at the general election by a vote of 110 to 67.

The action asks for an injunction to restrain the board of education from selling bonds, alleging that the expenditure of the sum of $40,000 for the construction of the fireproof building is at this time a gross abuse of the power and authority of the board of education, that the expenditure of so large a sum of money for such a building as is proposed to be constructed is far beyond the needs of said rural district and will be an economic waste of the taxpayer's money. The petition goes on to say that Wayne-twp is one of the smallest in the county and that there are not more than 150 students enrolled. There is a building at Westfall in the township which is in good repair and with its accessibility to other schools which are made available under the statutes for the pupils attending that school; that the building is within five miles of Circleville;
five miles of Union-twp centralized school in Ross-co; six miles of the Jackson-twp centralized school and that there are good roads to each school at all times
for the transportation of students to these schools.

The petition asks that the board of education be restrained from issuing or causing to be issued the bonds and from levying any tax for the purpose of constructing the school. It also asks that the county auditor, Bryce Briggs, be restrained from performing any act in connection with the school.

The signers of the action are:
J. B. Stevenson, Robert Immel,
Ward H. Peck, John C. Stevenson,
Frank Ebenhack, Andrew Corcoran,
George Wardell, William Hoffman, J. W. Haughn, F. B. Kibby,

as, J. F. Simkins, Jacob Scharenberg, William Metzger and Albert

John E. Stevenson, deceased.

The present board of education of Wayne-twp rural school district is composed of John Peters, John Wardell, Floyd Williams, Shirley Dowden, Asa Barthelmas and Ward H. Peck.

Corwin Street

First and Second Grades

The first and second grades of Corwin building are working on a Christmas operetta called "The Fairy Conspiracy," which will be presented in the high school auditorium Thursday evening, Dec. 19 at 8 o'clock.

The news reaches Fairyland that there is a child who does not believe in either fairies, brownies or Santa Claus, and does not even like fairy tales.

The fairies and brownies meet with Santa Claus and plan a way to make her believe in them.

Jane Pickett will play the part of the little girl who does not believe in fairy tales because her sister says they are not true.

With the help of the story book people: Cinderella, Martha Davis, Goldenlocks, Jane Sowers; Jack and Jill, Henry Davis and Helen Giffen; Jack of the Beanstalk, Jack Stag; Red Riding Hood, Helen Jewett; Little Bo-Peep, Mary Lutz; they finally make her believe in fairies, brownies and Santa Claus.

They decide to take her to Fairyland but first they call in their helpers, the Brownie Clowns: Billy Heffner, Glenn Rutler, Bobbie Garrett, James Frye, Roy and Floyd Birchwell, Jack Lake and David Eagleson.

The play ends with the fairy folk taking the little girl and her playmates to fairyland.

"The Pilgrims," a 3 reel moving picture was shown in the High School auditorium Wednesday afternoon to all grades of the Corwin street school and Walnut street school.

The film was purchased from the Yale University Press by the students who paid sums ranging from a penny to a dime for admission.

The seventh "A," Junior Citizens Education Club is proving a success. Last week the club presented a short play entitled "Why Dick Believed in Safety First."

"A, B. and C" classes are now using the Horace Mann Supplementary Arithmetic.

First and second grades of Corwin have been practicing the operetta they will soon present before the Christmas holidays. Practices have been held in the high school auditorium.

Walnut Street

Merle Reed and Eleanor Fitzpatrick, teachers at Walnut, have recovered from attacks of the grippe. Mrs. Louise Brown and Mrs. Channing Vlerebone substituted for the two teachers during their illness.

Special Education

Boys and girls in the higher special education under the supervision of Miss Marie Hamilton are having a perfect attendance contest. The side that losses will have to entertain the other side with an Christmas party. At the present each side is about the same. The boys are against the girls in the contest.

A Christmas program is being planned in the lower special education under the supervision of Miss Iris Fierce.

SPECIAL EDUCATION

A short Thanksgiving program was held in the lower special education. Miss Fierce read two stories, "The First Thanksgiving," and "Turkey Story." Each pupil had a Pilgrim boy and girl which were colored by them. They also played a turkey game with the turkeys they had made.

Ethel Chelen, and Berman Bass were elected mayor and policeman respectively.

The boys and girls are modeling clay.

WHY HAVE A STUDENT COURT?

By Martha Kinney

Although a student court has not been tried in Circleville High School recently, I think it would function just as smoothly here as in other schools. My reasons are:

1. It would keep the student body on its good behavior and eliminate what we call rule of just a few.

2. It would have an educative value for all the students.

3. It would give everyone a chance to prove his honesty and school spirit.

4. It would relieve the principal of such duty thereby give him more time to develop a larger and more systematic school for the pupils.

HIGH STREET Sixth Grade

Pupils are sending a vase filled with bittersweet to Orange Grove, Mississippi. The vase is decorated with colored advertisements.

They received from Orange Grove a basket made of long needed pine and a tin can. The basket is decorated with gull and is very beautiful. They also received a bunch of Kun Knats which resemble a small orange. The pupils are also going to exchange letters concerning their museum, with Ocean Springs, Mississippi.

Boys and girls from Isbell School, California are also exchanging articles with the sixth grade. The pupils of High-st are also going to send them articles from here, while the pupils of Isbell school are going to send back specimens of the big wood grown in California.

The pupils from Isbell school have already sent a picture of their school and a small pamphlet concerning it. The pamphlet is issued by the Chamber of Commerce of Santa Paula, California. Some very interesting facts were found in the pamphlet, one concerning the Lemonira Co., which is the largest lemon ranch in the world.

TWO CENTS AND A BIT OF HELP

You are interested in having accurate records in your fields of endeavor. So, too, are we of the Red and Black staff, who have charge of filing information of those having ben in classes in our high school since 1900. This information becomes of utmost news value whenever we are privileged to publish some item of interest in which one of you is a principal. We have been unable to get into communication otherwise with some, hence we hope this means to bring to us those necessary facts needed to complete our Biographical Reference library for the years before our "morgue" was established. Your cooperation will require but a moment's time and a small sum, yet will be appreciated inestimably as these facts are likely to be more reliable than those gathered from other sources.

CIRCLEVILLE'S PLACE IN NEW ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION SURE

Circleville's participation in a new high school athletic association, which has not been named yet, was assured Saturday when Principal E. I. Gephart and Coach J. M. Guthrie attended a meeting of the athletic boards of the other four schools already enrolled in the league at the Neil House, Columbus.

The league basketball chase will open for Circleville on Jan. 10 when the team treks to Westerville for a court battle there. Home and home games have been arranged by the committee, which will give each team a chance to play each other team twice.

The members of the league are, besides Circleville, Bexley, Grandview, Westerville and Granville.

The league has not been named yet although schools last spring voted on names they desired and sent them to the chairman of the organization, R. S. Kessler, of Bexley.

Names desired by members of the other schools were also sent to the league impresario and now it is planned to send the names back to the students to have one name for the league picked. Each school's selection will be given to the board of directors who will select the name for the league.

Circleville's gridiron schedule for the league has been completed according to an announcement by Principal Gephart Monday. On Oct. 3 Grandview will be met there; Oct. 10 Bexley here; Oct. 31 Westerville here; Nov. 14 Grandview there.

With this newly organized league it is expected that athletic interest which has been very much on the wane for the last two or three years here will pick up to a great extent.

All of the four schools that are in the league with Circleville are good athletic towns, two of them being the homes of colleges, and will provide much competition for the local athletes.

OHIO STATE SQUADS REST

Have Final Examinations This Week Then Mark Time Until Holidays.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 16.—After final examinations this week, Ohio State varsity squads will mark time until after the holidays. The basketball squad will play Notre Dame here on Dec. 28, and Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania on Dec. 31 and Jan. 1, respectively, on their floors.

In basketball, the Buckeyes hope to have a good team with all of the regular guards and forwards back from last season. If Coach H. G. Olsen can solve the problem at center, Ohio State may even be a championship contender.

The official conference season for the Ohioans open at Illinois on Jan. 6. Wisconsin comes here on Jan. 11, for the local curtain raiser.

Varsity wrestling will get under way Jan. 11 when Ohio State journeys to Cleveland to meet Western Reserve. Polo will be inaugurated Jan. 17 against Michigan State at East Lansing. Among the poloists is Allen Holman, captain of the 1929 football team, who is rated as the best Ohio State bet.

The gymnastic team will not begin its campaign until February when it meets Ohio Wesleyan at Delaware.

The Ohio State track team will meet Indiana at Bloomington on Feb. 8. George Simpson, holder of the world's record in the 100-yard dash and co-holder of the furlong mark and Richard Rockaway, record holder in the 220-yard low hurdles, will form the nucleus for the indoor squad.

The rifle team expects to shoot some two score meets during the winter months, the season opening Jan. 18, with three telegraphic matches.

"KONJOLA RESTORED MY HEALTH," SAYS YOUNGSTOWN LADY.

Stomach and Liver Troubles Ended By New Medicine; Now Has Greater Energy and Strength.

MRS. EMMA M. JONES.

"Both my stomach and liver were in a dreadful condition before I started the Konjola treatment," said Mrs. Emma M. Jones, 414 West Earl avenue, Youngstown, Ohio. "No matter how light the food I ate I was certain of some kind of suffering. Finally I lost all desire for food. Dizzy spells that made me reel from one side to the other, came over me at all times. I saw nothing ahead of me but suffering as everything I tried failed to do any good."

"A neighbor recommended Konjola and I decided to give it a trial. You can imagine my surprise when within two weeks I noticed a great improvement in my condition. Well, only a few bottles of this splendid medicine were necessary to completely restore my health. I never publicly indorsed a medicine before, but Konjola is one medicine that deserves my indorsement."

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists throughout this entire section.—Adv.

CIRCLEVILLE'S PLACE IN NEW ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION SURE

Circleville's participation in a new high school athletic association, which has not been named yet, was assured Saturday when Principal E. I. Gephart and Coach J. M. Guthrie attended a meeting of the athletic boards of the other four schools already enrolled in the league at the Neil House, Columbus.

The league basketball chase will open for Circleville on Jan. 10 when the team treks to Westerville for a court battle there. Home and home games have been arranged by the committee, which will give each team a chance to play each other twice.

The members of the league are, besides Circleville, Bexley, Grandview, Westerville and Granville.

The league has not been named yet although schools last spring voted on names they desired and sent them to the chairman of the organization, R. S. Kessler, of Bexley.

Names desired by members of the other schools were also sent to the league impresario and now it is planned to send the names back to the students to have one name for the league picked. Each school's selection will be given to the board of directors who will select the name for the league.

Circleville's gridiron schedule for the league has been completed according to an announcement by Principal Gephart Monday. On Oct. 8 Grandview will be met there; Oct. 10 Bexley here; Oct. 31 Westerville here; Nov. 14 Grandview there.

With this newly organized league it is expected that athletic interest which has been very much on the wane for the last two or three years here will pick up to a great extent.

All of the four schools that are in the league with Circleville are good athletic towns, two of them being the homes of colleges, and will provide much competition for the local athletes.

HABERDASHER QUINTET WINS

Buckets In Last Few Minutes Give Columbus Edge Over Canton, 33-27.

With Slim Shoun, Mike O'Neil and Mel Shaw coming through with field goals in the last few minutes of play to break a 27-all deadlock, the Columbus Robert Lee Haberdasher basketball team won its first victory in the newly organized National pro league from Canton by a 33-27 score in Aquinas gym, Columbus.

The Lees were hard pressed from the start and with Buck Lamme, former Ohio Wesleyan star, and Ken Failing formerly with Johnny Minor's Flint Buicks, leading the offensive for the Cantons, the game was very hotly contested from the start.

Lamme was high point man for the contest with three field goals and a like number of fouls.

"KONJOLA RESTORED MY HEALTH," SAYS YOUNGSTOWN LADY.

Stomach and Liver Troubles Ended by New Medicine; Now Has Greater Energy and Strength.

MRS. EMMA M. JONES.

"Both my stomach and liver were in a dreadful condition before I started the Konjola treatment," said Mrs. Emma M. Jones, 414 West Earl avenue, Youngstown, Ohio. "No matter how light the food I ate I was certain of some kind of suffering. Finally I lost all desire for food. Dizzy spells that made me reel from one side to the other, came over me at all times. I saw nothing ahead of me but suffering as everything I tried failed to do any good."

"A neighbor recommended Konjola and I decided to give it a trial. You can imagine my surprise when within two weeks I noticed a great improvement in my condition. Well, only a few bottles of this splendid medicine were necessary to completely restore my health. I never publicly endorsed a medicine before, but Konjola is one medicine that deserves my endorsement."

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists throughout this entire section. Adv.

OHIO STATE SQUADS REST

Have Final Examinations This Week Then Mark Time Until Holidays.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 16.—After final examinations this week, Ohio State varsity squads will mark time until after the holidays. The basketball squad will play Notre Dame here on Dec. 28, and Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania on Dec. 31 and Jan. 1, respectively, on their floors.

In basketball, the Buckeyes hope to have a good team with all of the regular guards and forwards back from last season. If Coach H. G. Olsen can solve the problem at center, Ohio State may even be a championship contender.

The official conference season for the Ohioans open at Illinois on Jan. 6. Wisconsin comes here on Jan. 11, for the local curtain raiser.

Varsity wrestling will get under way Jan. 11 when Ohio State journeys to Cleveland to meet Western Reserve. Polo will be inaugurated Jan. 17 against Michigan State at East Lansing. Among the poloists is Allen Holman, captain of the 1929 football team, who is rated as the best Ohio State bet.

The gymnastic team will not begin its campaign until February when it meets Ohio Wesleyan at Delaware.

The Ohio State track team will meet Indiana at Bloomington on Feb. 8. George Simpson, holder of the world's record in the 100-yard dash and co-holder of the furlong mark and Richard Rockaway, record holder in the 220-yard low hurdles, will form the nucleus for the indoor squad.

The rifle team expects to shoot some two score meets during the winter months, the season opening Jan. 18, with three telegraphic matches.

Corwin Street

First and Second Grades

The first and second grades of Corwin building are working on a Christmas operetta called "The Fairy Conspiracy", which will be presented in the high school auditorium Thursday evening, Dec. 19 at 8 o'clock.

The news reaches Fairyland that there is a child who does not believe in either fairies, brownies or Santa Claus, and does not even like fairy tales.

The fairies and brownies meet with Santa Claus and plan a way to make her believe in them.

Jane Pickens will play the part of the little girl who does not believe in fairy tales because her sister says they are not true.

With the help of the story book people: Cinderella, Martha Davis; Goldenlocks, Jane Sowers; Jack and Jill, Henry Davis and Helen Giffen; Jack of the Beanstalk, Jack Stag; Red Riding Hood, Helen Jewett; Little Bo-Peep, Mary Lutz; they finally make her believe in fairies, brownies and Santa Claus.

They decide to take her to Fairyland but first they call in their helpers, the Brownie Clowns: Billy Heffner, Glenn Rutler, Bobbie Garrett, James Frye, Roy and Floyd Birchwell, Jack Lake and David Eagleson.

The play ends with the fairy folk taking the little girl and her playmates to fairyland.

"The Pilgrims," a 3 reel moving picture was shown in the High School auditorium Wednesday afternoon to all grades of the Corwin street school and Walnut street school.

The film was purchased from the Yale University Press by the students who paid sums ranging from a penny to a dime for admission.

The seventh "A", Junior Citizens Education Club is proving a success. Last week the club presented a short play entitled "Why Dick Believed in Safety First."

"A, B, and C" classes are now using the Horace Mann Supplementary Arithmetic.

First and second grades of Corwin have been practicing the operetta they will soon present before the Christmas holidays. Practices have been held in the high school auditorium.

Walnut Street

Merle Reed and Eleanor Fitzpatrick, teachers at Walnut, have recovered from attacks of the grippe. Mrs. Louise Brown and Mrs. Channing Vlerebone substituted for the two teachers during their illness.

Special Education

Boys and girls in the higher special education under the supervision of Miss Marie Hamilton are having a perfect attendance contest. The side that losses will have to entertain the other side with an Christmas party. At the present each side is about the same. The boys are against the girls in the contest.

A Christmas program is being planned in the lower special education under the supervision of Miss Iris Fierce.

SPECIAL EDUCATION

A short Thanksgiving program was held in the lower special education. Miss Fierce read two stories, "The First Thanksgiving," and "Turkey Story." Each pupil had a Pilgrim boy and girl which were colored by them. They also played a turkey game with the turkeys they had made.

Ethel Chelen, and Berman Bass were elected mayor and policeman respectively.

The boys and girls are modeling clay.

WHY HAVE A STUDENT COURT?

By Martha Kinney

Although a student court has not been tried in Circleville High School recently, I think it would function just as smoothly here as in other schools. My reasons are:

1. It would keep the student body on its good behavior and eliminate what we call rule of just a few.

2. It would have an educative value for all the students.

3. It would give everyone a chance to prove his honesty and school spirit.

4. It would relieve the principal of such duty thereby give him more time to develop a larger and more systematic school for the pupils.

HIGH STREET Sixth Grade

Pupils are sending a vase filled with bitterness to Orange Grove, Mississippi. The vase is decorated with colored advertisements.

They received from Orange Grove a basket made of long needed pine and a tin can. The basket is decorated with guilt and is very beautiful. They also received a bunch of Kun Knats which resemble a small orange. The pupils are also going to exchange letters concerning their museum, with Ocean Springs, Mississippi.

Boys and girls from Isbell School, California, are also exchanging articles with the sixth grade. The pupils of High-st are also going to send them articles from here, while the pupils of Isbell school are going to send back specimens of the big wood grown in California.

The pupils from Isbell school have already sent a picture of their school and a small pamphlet concerning it. The pamphlet is issued by the Chamber of Commerce of Santa Paula, California. TWO CENTS AND A BIT OF HELP

You are interested in having accurate records in your fields of endeavor. So, too, are we of the Red and Black staff, who have charge of filing information of those having been in classes in our high school since 1900. This information becomes of utmost news value whenever we are privileged to publish some item of interest in which one of you is a principal. We have been unable to get into communication otherwise with some, hence we hope this means to bring to us those necessary facts needed to complete our Biographical Reference library for the years before our "morgue" was established. Your cooperation will require but a moment's time and a small sum, yet will be appreciated inestimably as these facts are likely to be more reliable than those gathered from other sources.

BY-PASSING TRAFFIC

Representatives of small towns and villages in Illinois have petitioned the state highway department to re-route roads around them, to rid them of the through traffic.

Here is official recognition of the new tendency, visible almost everywhere in this country. Until lately it was considered good business policy, and otherwise desirable, to bring as much motor traffic as possible into town. With the growing scope of traffic, and its increasing speed, it came to be a detriment. A steady stream of swift cars through the main street brought little local profit and interfered with the business, comfort and safety of the inhabitants. It became ever more difficult to enforce traffic regulations. So many small communities want to sidetrack this traffic, lest they be overwhelmed by it.

In larger towns it may be different. They can absorb considerable outside traffic, and often they profit greatly by it. But they, also, are inclined to provide by-passes for through traffic to keep it off their business streets.

Future traffic engineering will have to adapt itself to this situation.

PYRAMID FOR POSTERITY

"Coin," Harvey, famous free silver campaigner of the Ozarks, visiting Kansas City for 20,000 more bags of cement to finish his historic pyramid near Monte Ne, makes this pronouncement:

"Disintegration of the world's work will inevitably result unless the twentieth century builds its pyramids in which to safeguard treasures for future generations. There are things commonly used in the world today that will kill the present civilization. These objects will be gathered and stored in the pyramid as dangerous examples by which future generations may profit."

All right. Very likely America needed a pyramid, anyway. But it's always risky to plan for future generations. If they're intelligent, they can do their own planning; and if they're ignorant, as Mr. Harvey seems to assume they will be, whatever he leaves them may not do them much good.

This pyramid, too, may be less permanent than its builder thinks. Far bigger and stronger pyramids than his, in Egypt, were looted of their treasures by subsequent generations of rascals. And those looters had no pneumatic drills, acetylene torches and dynamite.

Mexico is going to ban all bull fights. Why not bull markets, too?

If this buying propaganda keeps on, salesmen won't be needed any more, and then there will have to be a relief movement for them.

"The Masked Hostess"

by BLAIR STEVENSON

CHAPTER XXXII.

IN the bank at Brookville Treadwell Pound sat in his office and gazed through his heavy glasses at the village street outside.

There was a one-annul lunch-room opposite the bank and Pound held a mortgage on the building it was in and a lien on the lunch-room's unpretentious furniture and fittings. Its proprietor, a Greek, had not been doing well since he had opened his modest place of business a few weeks before. He was the successor of another unsuccessful restaurateur whom Pound had previously closed out, and had entered into possession with little capital and because the terms Pound had offered him had seemed exceptionally attractive.

But he, like his predecessor, was on the swift road to bankruptcy, and as Pound glanced casually across at his place of refreshment, he reflected that he would soon have the property on his hands again to resell it and collect its value a third time. For Pound was always ready to operate on any money scale—to possess himself of a highly valuable property like Nathalie Van Slaick's or sell a small restaurant keeper out.

He noted as he looked at the Greek's again that for once the establishment was reasonably full of customers. There were eight men in it altogether and all of them in chairs commanding a good view of the bank. But Pound thought nothing of that; only that possibly business was picking up, and that the Greek might escape his clutches after all.

A trace of annoyance flickered over his pale face as he drew his hand map, with the state road through Nathalie's country place traced on it in dotted lines, from a drawer of his desk and studied it thoughtfully. Then he put it away and reflected as to how he could contrive to see her. For he had concluded to make her a cautious offer for the place and take title to it rather than wait for the eventuality of his foreclosure suit. He knew that Monty Delaine had sold out and he dreaded that whoever had bought from Monty might gain an interview with Nathalie before he could. He knew nothing of Ferris for Ferris had bought under a corporate name. He knew so little of Ferris, indeed, that he did not even know who he was when Ferris came into the bank, glanced at him casually, and then went to a teller's window, changed a bill and departed. He saw Ferris cross to the Greek restaurant and then forgot all about him.

But he was instantly alert a few minutes afterward when Nathalie entered.

Her manner had every trace of hurry and some strong emotion as she hurried to the paying teller's window and presented a check, two of them took positions in the which she had written rapidly at a counter. The teller looked at her, said something and nodded in Pound's direction. Nathalie came at once to Pound.

"I had forgotten," she said, "that I am not known at the window and must be identified. Will you arrange it for me, Mr. Pound?"

He observed her air of agitation closely and tried to divine the cause of it before he replied. He had no guess, of course, that her being in the bank was purely accidental; wholly the result of her incomplete knowledge of roads over which she had just driven in frantic haste.

For at the fork where she lost the car which was racing after her she had herself taken the wrong one of the two roads which it offered her and had unexpectedly come into the village of Brookville. As she found herself in its familiar streets a swift plan had formed in her mind of abandoning the car she was driving at a curb and taking a taxicab, which would be unrecognizable to her pursuers, for the rest of her journey. She had turned into Pound's bank after getting out of her car only so that, if the car behind her came into the village too, she would not be in sight when it arrived. But no taxicabs were about when she reached the bank's entrance, so she thought she could watch for one better from inside the bank than fully exposed in the street.

Her attempt to draw money had been only a subterfuge—to make her presence there more plausible. She had realized, while she had been driving along, that she could make over the bulk of her money to her aunt by writing a check for it. So the check she showed Pound as she asked him to identify her was only for a small amount.

She had carried a pair of pumps down the stairs with her at The First when she crept to Stefano's car in stocking feet. Pound noticed as she stood before him that the straps were unfastened. It went through his mind that her disarray might be due to the particularly uproarious night at The First—he had heard that nights there were like that—and he determined that he would begin negotiations with her immediately, now, while her faculties were probably fuddled.

"Good morning," he said. "I am glad you came in. I find that after all the bank may be prepared to make some concessions in its action if possibly—"

He got no further. For suddenly the eight men who had been sitting across in the Greek's restaurant came bustling into the bank in a body. Two of them stayed at the door, two of them walked toward tellers' cages,

DR. COPELAND SAYS— GUARD AGAINST QUICK CHANGES IN WEATHER

At the First Sign of a Cold, Take Steps to Check It,
Warns Dr. Copeland, Otherwise It May Lead
to More Troublesome Maladies.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

OF LATE there have been increasing attempts to find out the cause and cure for that troublesome thing, the common cold. There is probably no other "below par" condition so prevalent among every type of the civilized race as this one.

The chief danger about this condition is that it so often leads to even greater troubles and more serious disease. It affects many thousands of persons in every State and country. We must find a means to check this common tendency to have colds.

Good health is a strong chain, but, it has been said, "the strongest chain is no stronger than its weakest link." A man may pride himself on his robust, good health. Yet, when he least expects it, along comes a cold. Something depresses him, he has a slight indisposition, but he thinks lightly of it. If it is neglected, this "weak link," the cold, may bring him to something much worse, "a malady with a name."

It is not generally recalled that the nose and mouth are directly connected by the alimentary canal with the stomach and the whole digestive tract. What affects one is apt to affect all of these functions. When the delicate membrane of the nose or throat is inflamed, when any bad feelings in this region are felt, then you may look for trouble in the digestive functions of the body.

Over-feeding, under-feeding, over-tiredness and insufficient exercise are among the chief factors for lowered vitality. They are the foundation for the cold. Sore throat, indigestion, constipation and a cold may pave the way for something worse. They lead to influenza, pneumonia and the dread tuberculosis. If they are not corrected promptly further trouble must be expected.

Overcrowded conditions of living or working inevitably lead to a lowered bodily resistance. The cold is merely a symptom of run-down health. As I have said, it is a common forerunner of other worse conditions of health.

Persons living the out-of-door life, working in the fields or engaged in other work in the fresh air and sunshine, do not know cold. They are likely to be free from them. The reason is because such people have strong, vigorous bodies. They get the necessary exercise. They are hungry for plain and nourishing food. In consequence, they build up bodily resistance to colds and to disease in general.

It is the anemic, flabby person, the person prone to obesity, and the chronically constipated person who is most liable to colds. All of these conditions of health should be corrected.

Fresh air and sunshine are Nature's tonics, disinfectants and cure. There is no substitute to compare with them. All these, together with plenty of bodily exercise and good nourishing food, are absolutely essential if we are to have good health.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Acclaim from an audience is one thing, but when experienced stage and screen directors and actors applaud a bit of vivid acting, that is something to feel proud of.

When Barbara Stanwyck completed a dramatic sequence in George Fitzmaurice's "The Locked Door" the featured all-dialogue picture at the Cliftona theatre, she was glowingly complimented on her "trouping" by no less experts than Fitzmaurice, Earle Browne, the co-director of dialogue scenes and a famous stage producer, and Harry Mestayer, a member of the cast who was one of Broadway's most successful actor-directors.

Rod LaRocque, William Boyd and Betty Bronson, also joined in the acclaim. Miss Bronson admitted that Miss Stanwyck's scene had so affected her she cried.

I suppose I am vain—most theatrical persons are—but I like to be told I did good work. It thrills me and unconsciously I try all the harder to do those bigger and better things we all strive for."

AT THE MET

The story of "Oh, Yeah!" Pathe's dialogue feature comedy with Robert Armstrong and James Gleason in the leading roles, the locale of which is in a railroad construction camp, with the characters living in car homes on the sidings, was not far from the reality recently during the making of the picture.

On location in the rugged section of Feather River, in Upper California, Tay Garnett, the director, and his company lived for more than a week in railroad cars and were a community unto themselves far from the maddening throng. The difference was that, instead of freight cars, the "Oh, Yeah!" company lived in Pullmans with a special diner and club car, arranged through the Union Pacific railroad, with one of the crack chefs of the system catering to palates of a hard working group of troupers.

One of the thrilling sequences photographed with sound at the Feather River location was a race between two runaway trains, one bearing Armstrong and the other Gleason.

sides the featured players, are Patricia Carson Zasu Pitts, Paul Hurst, Frank Hagney, Bud Fine and others. The picture at the Met theatre on Monday and Tuesday was adapted from A. W. Somerville's Saturday Evening Post story, "No Brakes."

College football heroes, those burly lads who haul ice all summer, occupy the front page all fall and then go into the bond business have been good-naturedly satirized in the talkies.

Warner Bros. have built their screen version of "The Time, the Place and the Girl" from the famous stage success by Adams, Hough and Howard, around a character who is a composite of all the gridiron heroes of the day. Robert Lord made the screen adaptation of this famous stage comedy which is at the Grand theatre on Monday and Tuesday.

Grant Withers takes the part of the football hero. His portrayal give the low-down on just what football stars do study in order to keep from flunking. He is the boy who makes the 75-yard broken-field run in the last minute of play and is carried off the field by a frantic and idolizing mob.

Gertrude Olmsted has the romantic role opposite Withers and the cast includes Betty Compson, John Davidson, James R. Kirkwood, Bert Roach, Vivian Oakland, Gerald King, Irene Haisman and Gretchen Hartman. Howard Bretherton directed.

CHAPTER XXXII.
In the bank at Brookville Treadwell Pound sat in his office and gazed through his heavy glasses at the village street outside.

There was a one-armed lunch-room opposite the bank and Pound held a mortgage on the building it was in and a lien on the lunch-room's unpretentious furniture and fittings. Its proprietor, a Greek, had not been doing well since he had opened his modest place of business a few weeks before. He was the successor of another unsuccessful restaurateur whom Pound had previously closed out, and had entered into possession with little capital and because the terms Pound had offered him had seemed exceptionally attractive.

But he, like his predecessor, was on the swift road to bankruptcy, and as Pound glanced casually across at his place of refreshment, he reflected that he would soon have the property on his hands again to resell it and collect its value a third time. For Pound was always ready to operate on any money scale—to possess himself of a highly valuable property like Nathalie Van Sluick's or sell a small restaurant keeper out.

He noted as he looked at the Greek's again that for once the establishment was reasonably full of customers. There were eight men in it altogether, and all of them in chairs commanding a good view of the bank. But Pound thought nothing of that; only that possibly business was picking up, and that the Greek might escape his clutches after all.

A trace of annoyance flickered over his pale face as he drew his land map, with the state road through Nathalie's country place traced on it in dotted lines, from a drawer of his desk and studied it thoughtfully. Then he put it away and reflected as to how he could contrive to see her. For he had concluded to make her a cautious offer for the place and take title to it rather than wait for the eventuality of his forcible suit.

He knew that Monty Delaine had sold out and he dreaded that woe might gain an interview with Nathalie before he could. He knew nothing of Ferris for Ferris had bought under a corporate name. He knew so little of Ferris, indeed, that he did not even know who he was, glanced at him casually, and then when Ferris came in, drew, changed a bill and departed. He saw Ferris cross to the Greek restaurant and then for, out all about him.

But he was instantly alert a few minutes afterward when Nathalie entered. Her manner had every trace of hurry and some strong emotion as she hurried to the paying teller's window and presented a check which she had written rapidly at a counter. The teller looked at her, said something and nodded in Pound's direction. Nathalie came at once to Pound.

"I had forgotten," she said, "that I am not known at the window and must be identified. Will you arrange it for me, Mr. Pound?"

He observed her air of agitation closely and tried to divine the cause of it before he replied. He had no guess, of course, that her being in the bank was purely accidental; wholly the result of her incomplete knowledge of roads over which she had just driven in frantic haste.

For at the fork where she lost the car which was racing after her she had herself taken the wrong one of the two roads which it offered her and had unexpectedly come into the village of Brookville. As she found herself in its familiar streets a car had formed in her mind of abandoning the car she was driving at a curb and taking a taxi, which would be unrecognizable to her pursuers, for the rest of her journey. She had turned into Pound's bank after getting out of her car only so that, if the car behind her came into the village too, she would not be in sight when it arrived. But no taxis were about when she reached the bank's entrance, so she thought she could watch for one better from inside the bank than fully exposed in the street.

Her attempt to draw money had been only a subterfuge—to make her presence there more plausible. She had realized, while she had been driving along, that she could make over the bulk of her money to her aunt by writing a check for it. So the check she showed Pound as she asked him to identify her was only for a small amount.

She had carried a pair of pumps down the stairs with her at The First when she crept to Stefano's car in stocking feet. Pound noticed as she stood before him that the straps were unfastened. It went through his mind that her disarray might be due to the particularly uproarious night at The First—he had heard that nights there were like that—and he determined that he would begin negotiations with her immediately, now while her faculties were probably fogged.

"Good morning," he said. "I am glad you came in. I find that after all the bank may be prepared to make some concessions in its action if possible."

He got no further. For suddenly the eight men who had been sitting across in the Greek's restaurant came bustling into the bank in a body. Two of them stayed at the door, two of them walked toward teller's cages, two of them took positions in the middle of the floor, and two of them came to the door of Pound's office. Then all eight drew revolvers.

"Stick 'em up!" Pound, shaking, obeyed the man who gave him the command. There was utter silence in the bank as all the members of its small staff raised their hands above their heads.

The fellow standing beside the man who covered Pound spoke, quite gently, to Nathalie.

"You ain't in this anywhere, lady. Beat it to the street while the going's good."

Nathalie turned and ran across the bank floor. At the street door one of the men there caught her for a second by an arm.

"Don't run, lady. Just walk out. And when you hit the street keep right on walking and don't look back."

As she plunged, terrified, into the sunlit avenue, she found no excitement in it and no one outside but a couple of taximen. One of them touched his cap to her.

"Taxi, lady?" He took her by an arm and guided her to his vehicle and as she sank trembling into the recess of it he asked her where she wished to go.

"Westbury," she gasped, "to Mrs. Swayne's as fast as you can drive."

"Sure, Flintstone," he and he touched his cap again. "I know the place. I'll make it snappy, lady."

He drove quickly out of the village and his car was rolling rapidly along the right road for Flintstone when he stopped it suddenly and got out and looked under the flap of the hood and then went back and unscrewed the cap of his gas tank and peered in.

He came and opened the door beside Nathalie and touched his cap again.

"What'dye know, lady? Clean outta gas. But it's all right. Here's another taxi right behind."

He hailed the oncoming car and it halted. The chauffeur of it explained that his car was not a taxi but a private one but that he would be glad to take the young woman to Westbury as he was going there, too.

The car was a closed one, roomy and expensive. Nathalie felt reassured as she discovered a lady and a gentleman in its rear seat. The woman graciously extended a helpful hand as the girl entered and took her place between the couple. Nathalie had started to thank them for this courtesy of the road, when the woman reached deftly into a handbag, drew forth a large handkerchief reeking of chloroform and held it securely against the girl's mouth and nose.

DR. COPELAND SAYS— GUARD AGAINST QUICK CHANGES IN WEATHER

At the First Sign of a Cold, Take Steps to Check It,
Warns Dr. Copeland, Otherwise It May Lead
to More Troublesome Maladies.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

OF LATE there have been increasing attempts to find out the cause and cure for that troublesome thing, the common cold. There is probably no other "below par" condition so prevalent among every type of the civilized race as this one.

The chief danger about this condition is that it so often leads to even greater troubles and more serious disease. It affects many thousands of persons in every State and country. We must find a means to check this common tendency to have colds.

Good health is a strong chain, but it has been said, "the strongest chain is no stronger than its weakest link." A man may pride himself on his robust, good health. Yet, when he least expects it, along comes a cold. Something depresses him, he has a slight indisposition, but he thinks lightly of it. If it is neglected, this "weak link," the cold, may bring him to something much worse, "a malady with a name."

It is not generally recalled that the nose and mouth are directly connected by the alimentary canal with the stomach and the whole digestive tract. What affects one is apt to affect all of the delicate membrane of the nose or throat in the digestive functions of the body.

Over-feeding, under-feeding, over-tiredness and insufficient exercise are among the chief factors for lowered vitality. They are the foundation for the cold. Sore throat, indigestion, constipation and a cold may pave the way for something worse. They lead to influenza, pneumonia and the dread tuberculosis. If they are not corrected promptly further trouble must be expected.

Overcrowded conditions of living or working inevitably lead to a lowered bodily resistance. The cold is merely a symptom of run-down health. As I have said, it is a common forerunner of other worse conditions of health.

Persons living the out-of-door life, working in the fields or engaged in other work in the fresh air and sunshine, do not know colds. They are likely to be free from them. The reason is because such people have strong, vigorous bodies. They get the necessary exercise. They are hungry for plain and nourishing food. In consequence, they build up bodily resistance to colds and to disease in general.

It is the anaemic, flabby person, the person prone to obesity, and the chronically constipated person who is most liable to colds. All of these conditions of health should be corrected.

Fresh air and sunshine are Nature's tonics, disinfectants and cures. There is no substitute to compare with them. All these, together with plenty of bodily exercise and good nourishing food, are absolutely essential if we are to have good health.
